
The Appomattox Middle School Art Exhibit was displayed on tables and panels and represented a variety of works from painting to macrame.

Projects consisted of both two-dimensional and three-dimensional work and ranged in media from pencil to yarn fibers and clay.

Art Exhibit Held At Middle School Tuesday Night

The Art Exhibit was presented in conjunction with the Parent-Teacher Association and contained a wide variety of works. These ranged from drawings and paintings in the Fine Arts to projects in crafts such as Macrame. Three-Dimensional work was included, architectual designs, clay landscapes and relief sculpture.

The work represented projects of 7th and 8th grade Art students from both Exploratory and Art I Courses. It consists of class projects since the beginning of the school year and is the result of studies in Design, Environmental Awareness and specific types of Art.

A nail sculpture simply entitled "Truckin" and a relief work labeled "Sam's Junk Yard" were two of the highlights at the Appomattox Middle School Art Exhibit.

Career Assembly Held For SCA

Want to be a lawyer? How about a social worker or an investigator? Students at ACHS were helped with the decision making of prospects of their lives when three interested citizens of Appomattox County came to school on Dec. 17,1975.

December was legal occupations month for the SCA sponsored Career Assembly, an assembly designed to assist students in making decisions about certain chosen professions.

Mr. Tommy Lawson, a lawyer in Appomattox County, discussed and explained the competitiveness for admission to college and law school. He also explained the duties of legal work and the differences between independent lawyers and working for a law firm.

A presently employed social worker for Appomattox County is Eva Moore. Ms. Moore told of the duties, personal reward, salaries, and educational background needed for this line of work. Ms. Moore also explained the different varities of field work available with this occupation.

The last speaker on the agenda was Mr. Herbert Chambers, an investigator from the State Police, Appomattox Division. Mr. Chambers did an excellent job of informing students of the work load of state police affiliated careers.

The SCA would like to express their deepest gratitude for these fine citizens help.

Storing Turkey

Blacksburg..When the traditional holiday turkey is not gracing the dinner table, the bird belongs in the refrigerator or freezer.

Both cooked and uncooked, poultry and stuffing are targets for unsafe bacteria that can cause food-borne illness, said Jo Anne Barton, assistand professor of home economics and Virginia Tech Extension specialist in foods and nutrition. Keeping the turkey and trimmings safe to eat means not allowing the rapid-multiplying bacteria the time and temperature in which to grow.

Chilled, raw turkey can be stored for one to two days in the coldest part of the refrigerator, Barton said.

"Store giblets seperately from the rest of the bird," she said. "Remove any cardboard trays or film wrappings used in retail packaging and wrap loosely to allow for air circulation."

To store cooked turkey, cook quickly and put in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Stuffing should be removed from cooked poultry, cooled quickly and stored separetly in a covered container for safety.

"Use cooked poultry or stuffing within one or two days," said Barton.

For best results, continued Barton, poultry should be packaged in moisture-vapor-resistant wrapping or bag, or suitable rigid container, frozen at zero degrees Fahrenheit or lower and held at that temperature. Uncooked turkey can be stored this way for 12 months.

Cooked turkey slices or pieces not covered with broth or gravy can be stored frozen for one month. If parts of the turkey are covered with broth or gravy, they can be stored for six months. Cooked poultry dishes can also be frozen up to six months.

"Never," Barton warned, "stuff the turkey before freezing. Always freeze cooked poultry and stuffing seperately.

bviously they had done something wrong. Back they went to the store and picked up another box of chicks and this time they planted them heads up. The next morning it was the same situation--they were all dead.

This couple had heard that there was a county Agent in that county so they went to see him, explained what had happened and asked what they had done wrong.

The County Agent said, "Well now, I don't know a whole lot about poultry, but I believe the first thing you ought to do is take a soil sample---"
